

A BIT OF LUCK, A LOT OF WORK

An American Success Story

When Halyna won a Diversity Immigrant Visa—better known as the Green Card Lottery—she was one of the lucky few selected from millions of applicants across the globe. This visa offered a life-changing opportunity: the chance to live and work in the United States permanently. But like many immigrants, Halyna arrived with almost nothing—no network, no job, and barely any English. She could say, “My name is Halyna. I am from Ukraine.” That was all.

Back in Ukraine, Halyna held a Ph.D. in accounting and auditing. She had worked as a social worker and even owned her own restaurant, but in the U.S., her credentials and experience didn’t matter. Without language skills, her path forward was extremely limited. The only work she could find was in housekeeping. She felt isolated and overwhelmed, but she refused to give up.

Determined to build a better life, Halyna turned to Literacy for Life, hoping to learn the English she so desperately needed. But learning wasn’t easy. She was juggling two—sometimes three—jobs just to stay afloat. Her work schedule was unpredictable and exhausting. Attending classes on a regular schedule felt impossible. That’s when she met her tutor, Bert. “One of the best things about Bert was how flexible and kind he was,” Halyna says. “He even rearranged his own work and family schedule to meet with me. He didn’t just teach me English—he gave me the tools to survive and thrive. I learned something new every single day.”

With Bert’s support, Halyna’s confidence began to grow. Slowly but surely, she improved her reading, writing, and speaking skills. That progress opened the door to one achievement after another: she earned her driver’s license, completed apartment applications, and became a proud U.S. citizen!

Professionally, Halyna never stopped climbing. She rose from housekeeper to supervisor, then assistant manager, then manager. Meanwhile, she became a manager and bartender at Kingsmill Resort. Recently, she landed a job at Ferguson Enterprises as Department of Transportation/Driver Compliance Business Partner.

“I am so grateful to everyone who helped me get here,” she said. “I love my job. I finally feel like I’m doing what I was meant to do.” As Halyna settles into her new job, she is already looking for ways to give back.

“When I have more time, I want to come back to Literacy for Life—not as a student, but as a volunteer. I want to help others the way I was helped.”

Halyna tells other learners:

“Don’t panic. Never give up. Keep moving forward. I am proud of what I’ve done, and even though it was difficult, but I wouldn’t change anything. To everyone who supports Literacy for Life—you truly make a difference.”

50 YEARS OF CHANGING LIVES THROUGH LITERACY

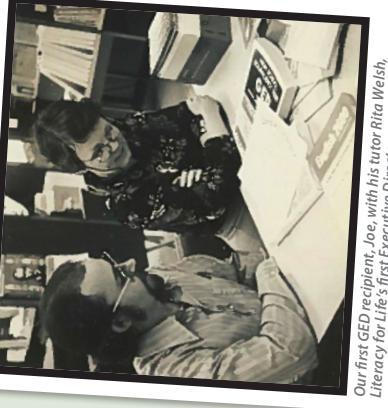

For half a century, Literacy for Life (LFL) has been a beacon of hope, transformation, and empowerment. What began humbly in 1975—helping just 30 William & Mary employees learn to read—has blossomed into a dynamic, community-rooted organization that served over 1,000 adult learners last year.

At the heart of LFL's success is its unwavering belief in the power of education to change lives. Thanks to the passion of dedicated volunteers, staff, and community partners, thousands of individuals have gained not just literacy skills, but the confidence and tools to build better futures. From one-on-one tutoring to small-group instruction, LFL has always prioritized personalized learning that honors everyone's unique journey.

Over the decades, LFL has evolved to meet the changing needs of its learners—whether it's a refugee starting fresh in a new land, a parent working toward a better job to support their family, or an adult determined to earn a high school credential. These learners are more than statistics; they are stories of resilience, courage, and growth.

Fifty years in, LFL remains as committed as ever to its mission: empowering adults through education. As we celebrate this golden milestone, we raise a toast to the past that built us, the present that inspires us, and the future we are shaping together.

Here's to 50 years of Literacy for Life—and to brighter, more literate tomorrows.
